

Adolf Hitler

The Incestuous Catholic Jew

“How incomplete, how absent, how fragmentary our knowledge of Hitler’s past and what made him tick is.”¹

If you want to create a revolution, introduce new expectations and rules to live by. If you want to make a revolutionary, create someone out of their time – and ensure they are disgruntled about it. This is simply done by training them in an ideology different from their time or what is currently being expressed. Many are trained and most fall away. The one who survives to lead will be a revolutionary for a variety of reasons. The harder time they have, the more changes they will make. This is called ‘creating potential in the revolutionary’.

Most movements created are exported overseas for subversive reasons. Movements and ideologies have become the new war. With a movement or ideology it is possible to destroy an opposing country without firing a weapon. Political Correctness is a prime example – invented in Russia, it was exported to the West to destroy the family and fun . . . and to stop progress.

Hitler’s family history is a near perfect example of how to create a criminal. Sadly, his personal history has been taken as an exemplary family pattern and is being repeated as closely as possible by nearly every government department involved with children across the Western world . . . but I’ve taken the stage here to outline Hitler’s origins and expose his training. His initial nature was kind, caring and gentle. He was a typical beaten boy from a family that had plenty to hide.

Catholic Incest

Officially Hitler had incestuous parents in Alois and Klara. His father’s grandparents and his mother’s great-grandparents were the same two people, making their marriage second- and third-degree incest – the wife (25) being the niece of the husband (48) who was also her uncle. This was no doubt known to Hitler and confused the family tree and the head that studied it. _____
